

Great Linford Waterside Festival

Memories and photographs from the festival

"It's just very laid back. Lots of people turn up, all ages and different backgrounds. We just sit down on the grass together, and it's not super slick. You can go there spend nothing if you want to, but there's things you can have fun with and spend your cash on. We spent hours and hours with our daughter whilst she pondered over the RSPCA stall, deciding what to spend with her pocket money, which little notebook or keyring, and we try and whizz past the ones where you can spend a pound buying things."

James Easton – Festival Visitor

"Last year, I remember standing in the middle of the park half way through the event and realising that it was just wonderful to bring such a diverse group of people together from all walks of life through music, sports and these other activities in this wonderful setting, and absolutely everyone was enjoying themselves."

Deborah Cooper – Chair

"It's not like going to a concert, it's not specifically a concert, it's an event with all the various stalls and stuff that's going on as well. The art shows and things like that and the small stage so it's more of an event to walk around and do stuff in."
