

People and Animals

At the core of all Inter-Action MK activities over the years has been the team of staff and volunteers who have given an enormous amount of time and energy putting ideas into action with local communities. Many lasting friendships have been formed and working lives changed. People have built on their creative experiences to forge careers or to help others find their own skills.

The land at The Old Rectory was an important part of the plan, used as a community farm with sheep, goats and other animals.

The Horse Group, which was based at the stables, became an important facility both for young people looking for a unique learning experience and for disabled people who were given the opportunity to enjoy outings on horseback.

The grounds are still home to chickens, cats and lots of wildlife.
