

Today and Tomorrow...

Community Arts will always be an effective tool in building community spirit. People of all ages and abilities grow in confidence, gain skills and knowledge, make friends and have fun together.

Funding is a constant issue but an organisation with the traditions and reputation built by Inter-Action MK should always be worthy of support.

The organisation will continue to work with innovative artists who are effective enablers, showing communities what they are really capable of.

The foundations were set in 1976. The local environment has evolved from a few scattered estates into a mature urban area but, as Inter-Action MK Trustee Louise Boniface says, 'Today's local communities also need that spirit, that sense of working together and belonging. The inclusive approach of Inter-Action MK can continue to add value to people's lives.'
